Foreword

In presenting Who's Who in South Carolina, the author desires to thank Alexander S. Salley, State Historical Commissioner, and other men who have rendered much valuable information in the matter of suggesting men whose names are worthy of perpetuation.

Here are epitomized the stories of opportunity grandly improved by hundreds of men who have helped to shape the conditions of today in South Carolina thought and action and who are bearing an important share in fashioning the still more grand Tomorrow of our State.

The work of selecting the names and procuring biographical material has been prosecuted with the utmost zeal and care; but, while the results have been gratifying, it is true that there are names that should be included that are absent. In a State as large as ours even approximate success in the judicious selection of a certain class of distinguished names is a difficult task; and, after they are selected appropriate data in regard to them are not always procurable. Therefore, even with the utmost effort, there is an unrecorded remnant.

One of the chief purposes of this book is to place before the students of this State the achievements of the successful men of this State in the hopes that their examples may create an interest and arouse a spirit of emulative homage which cannot fail to prove of great practical benefit to the pupil in after life.

A close examination of the sketches in this volume disclose many extraordinary examples of industry which are overlooked in a cursory reading, but which, nevertheless, are full of valuable suggestions for the thoughtful mind. Hundreds of activities are chronicled which might be emulated with profit, not only by the youth of the State, but by all classes.

CONVERSE COLLEGE

Spartanburg, South Carolina

HISTORY.—Founded in 1889 by D. E. Converse and other leading citizens of Spartanburg for the higher education of young women. Increased patronage every year, representing all the Southern and many Eastern and Western States.

LOCATION.—Situated in Spartanburg, S. C., one of the most thriving cities of the Piedmont belt, over 800 feet above the sea-level, 35 miles distant from the Blue Ridge, with a mean annual temperature of 61 degrees; at the junction of five railroads.

ADMINISTRATION.—Not owned or controlled by Church, State or Private Corporation. Owes no debt and pays no dividends. All fees and interest on invested funds used for the benefit of the students. Managed by a self-perpetuating Board of Trustees.

CHARACTER.—While non-denominational, not being allowed to choose majority of Faculty or Board from any one church, it is distinctively Christian in its instruction and teaching force. Students attend their own churches. The Bible is taught as a text-book, and a Y. W. C. A. is in active operation.

CURRICULA.—Courses leading to degrees A.B., B.S., A.M., and B.Mus. One of six Southern women's colleges honored with membership in the Association of Colleges of the Southern States.

GROUNDS.—Contain 42 acres, including 12-acre campus in front, 8-acre farm in rear for supplying table, and a 22-acre oak grove. Nicely kept grounds for tennis, basket ball, and other athletic games.

BUILDINGS.—Six large and six smaller buildings, the larger buildings connected by covered ways, kept at the same temperature throughout, containing 107 students' rooms, heated by steam, lighted with electricity, well ventilated, with spacious halls and corridors extending entire length of every floor. Boarding students limited to 190.

HEALTH AND FIRE PROTECTION.—A physician residing in the College, exercising hygienic care over the students to prevent development of disease; admirable system of ventilation; best arranged toilet facilities; excellent drainage, both natural and artificial; kitchen and boiler house with automatic sprinklers; water pipes on every floor, with hose attached; and fire-escapes.
